For Immediate Release – August 2012

MVCTC Welcomes Students for 2012-2013 School Year

Clayton, Ohio -- The Miami Valley Career Technology Center (MVCTC) began their 41st year of classes on Monday, August 20, 2012. MVCTC Superintendent Dr. Nick Weldy, staff, and Student Ambassadors greeted close to 1,900 junior and senior students enrolled for the 2012-2013 school year.

High school students are preparing for careers in fields such as animal care, agriculture science, Air Force, healthcare, architecture, auto technician, aviation maintenance, biotechnology, business, computer networking, computer repair, computer game programming, carpentry, cosmetology, criminal justice, culinary arts, dental assisting, digital design, early childhood education, electrical trades, environmental engineering, food science, geospatial information systems, graphic arts, photography, HVAC, heavy equipment operation, legal assisting, marketing, masonry, media & video production, power technologies, precision machining, robotics, sports medicine, veterinary science, and welding.

MVCTC is preparing our region's 21st century workforce. MVCTC is providing an education that prepares adult and high school learners from 27 partner school districts for in demand jobs.

This year MVCTC is excited to continue the tradition of ensuring students are college and career ready, by offering early college connections with Clark State Community College, Miami University Middletown, Sinclair Community College, and Wright State University. MVCTC students now have even more options to earn college credit while still in high school, making a college degree even more affordable and attainable.
